The lives of an intertwined group of people take a new direction as all they have taken for granted starts to change. LOVER BOY

(Romania/2011/Color/95 mins.)

Director : Catalin Mitulescu
Start : George Pistereanu, Ada Condeescu, Clara Voda, Bogdan Dumitache

Loverboy is a 2011 Romanian drama film directed by Catalin Mitulescu. It premiered in the uncertain regard section at the 2011 Cannes Film Festival.

First love has never felt more dangerous. A love story dredged up from the murky background of prostitution and human trafficking, Loverboy deftly demonstrates the A-Z of how to charm a girl into the sex trade. Twenty-year-old Luca (George Pistereanu), gorgeous and superficially innocent, seduces girls and then leaves them in the hands of his "friends" at the Black Sea resort of Constanta. It's summer, the cars are fancy, the girls are tanned and the music is loud. Remaining coolly aloof from his smitten targets, all goes relatively smoothly until he meets the beautiful and exuberant small-town runaway, Veli, and his lucrative sideline is imperiled when he starts to have feelings for her. Shot in shimmering widescreen, Catalin Mitulescu has brilliantly delineated a world in which it's horrifyingly normal for young girls to fall prey to the world of vice, and raises the question of whether it's possible to live normally and honor love if one's own life lacks love. Romanian cinema is improving exponentially, and Mitulescu has just taken a giant leap of his own with this auspicious sophomore offering.

It is a satire about life in Cuba. When Aunt Yoyita dies during a visit to Gina in Guantánamo, Gina, along with Yoyita's childhood sweetheart, the aging Cándido, must take the body to Havana. To their annoyance, Gina's overbearing husband Adolfo, a punctilious undertaker with political ambitions, takes charge of the journey. On the road, they keep crossing paths with Mariano, a trucker who's a playboy with a woman at every way station.
